Executive Education Programme
on 'Building Resilience'

Despite increased levels of higher education, the number of women participating in the Indian workforce is on the decline — from 35% in 2005 to 24% in 2018 — making us one of the lowest in the world.

How do we reverse this trend? How can we equip ourselves to navigate professional and personal challenges and achieve careers of distinction?

Having witnessed the successful personal transformation of women through our 18-month postgraduate programme in management practice and leadership, the Vedica Scholars Programme for Women now brings its mantra for success to the corporate world.

Its third executive education programme empowers women to take charge of their personal growth, stay in the workforce and realise their professional and personal goals.

ABOUT VEDICA

The Vedica Scholars Programme for Women is a unique alternative to the traditional MBA programme with a mission to prepare women with potential to achieve fulfilling careers. Our executive education programmes further our commitment to create a cadre of successful women professionals who seek leadership roles of distinction at every level of the organisation.

WHO SHOULD ATTEND?

The module is being offered to women professionals across domains and functions. We encourage nominations from companies looking to demonstrate their commitment to diversity and inclusion.
